The Women of the Household of Prophet Muhammad (s.a.w)

The most powerful and influential women in 6th century Arabia have emerged from none other than the very household of the Prophet of Islam, Muhammad (s.a.w). As a champion for the rights of women and their emancipator in an era of great repression and moral decadence, Prophet Muhammad (s.a.w) ensured that the women of his household stood as a practical testament to the principles he preached. His wives, daughters and granddaughters were the epitome of the true representation of the free and confident Muslim woman under the newly charted constitution of Islam, the Holy Quran.

Mohamed Riza Sadak of Milton Keynes, UK receives the NHS Hero Award
